PRIVATE GUIDED VISIT TO THE OLD OPERATING THEATRE 9a St Thomas Street London SE1 9RY Tuesday 21st March 2017

The Old Operating Theatre is one of the most unusual museums in London, which is over the unique Herb Garret of St Thomas Church and is the oldest Theatre in Europe, being part of the original St Thomas Hospital. When St Thomas's Church was re-built in 1703, it had an unusually large Garret in the roof space and this was used by the St Thomas's Apothecary to store and cure herbs

On arrival, there will be the opportunity to walk about in the Herb Garrett and look at the many artifacts. Then we shall go up to the Theatre itself, where we will have a talk on aspects of the former work there as set against the history and the years since. Whilst we are in the Theatre, we shall be seated round like the students of old and can absorb the ancient teaching methods.

Following our visit, we will go round the corner for a two-course supper with wine – I will send you the menu choices immediately you book - and our meal will be served promptly after we get there.

PS There are a number of stairs in the Theatre building and therefore I regret that this visit is not really suitable if these would be too challenging!
