GROUP VISIT TO THE LONDON MITHRAEUM
12 Walbrook London EC4N 8AA
Thursday 2nd May 2019 for entry at 7.00 pm

We have managed to reserve 30 tickets for a tour of the newly opened London Mithraeum, the Roman Temple of Mithras, available to public viewing only a short while ago.

Situated on the site of Bloomberg's new European headquarters in the heart of the City, it showcases the ancient temple and a selection of the remarkable Roman artefacts found during the recent excavation, which was one the most extensive ever to have taken place in London. It revealed new evidence of the area's Roman origins, the site lying over the course of one of London's lost rivers, the Walbrook, and nearly 2,000 years ago - when Londinium was founded by the Romans - this river marked the limits of their first settlement in the 3rd century AD. Nearly 200 years after the founding of London, a Roman Londoner built a temple to the god Mithras on this reclaimed ground and the mysterious cult of Mithras spread across Europe, attracting soldiers, merchants and imperial administrators. We anticipate that there will be a good deal of interest in this visit and we will try to repeat the evening later in the year if numbers so merit.

We shall be admitted at 7.00 pm sharp and our visit will last about an hour, after which we shall have supper locally. The visit to the Mithraeum is free but I will let you know the cost of the supper if you have indicated your wish to join us. However, we hope you will join the Chairman and his wife on this special City evening and I look forward to hearing from you.
